

Jessica Davey

2021 4-H Canada Leadership Excellence Award of Distinction Recipient, Sustainable Agriculture & Food Security

Jessica Davey has been a 4-H member for the last ten years, in Saskatoon, where she lives with her family and works for their commercial and purebred beef cattle company.

Throughout her time in 4-H, Jessica has completed many different beef projects, as well as poultry and veterinary projects. Over the years, Jessica has enjoyed the opportunities and skills she has been able to develop through 4-H, such as public speaking, judging, cattle grooming, photography, graphic design, and marketing and showing beef cattle.

Jessica is pursuing a Bachelor of Science in Agriculture at the University of Saskatchewan, further fuelling her passion for sustainable agriculture and food security. With her major in Animal Science and her minor in Rangeland Resources, Jessica hopes to pursue a career in progressive livestock production, while also running a farm-to-table business and staying active as a 4-H leader.

Jessica hopes to one day achieve a greater sense of transparency between producers, consumers, and youth through agricultural programs and food traceability.
