

Kate Axten

2022 4-H Canada Leadership Excellence Awards of Distinction Recipient, Sustainable Agriculture & Food Security

Kate Axten has been a part of the Radville 4-H Field Crops Club for the past 10 years. She has enjoyed the many opportunities that 4-H has provided her with, including public speaking, and loves that 4-H has allowed her to connect with, and act as a leader for youth in her club and community.

Kate lives on her family's grain farm at Minton, SK. She comes from a family of innovative farmers who like to try new ideas. This has inspired her love of agriculture and her passion for food and business. The connection between how food is grown, and the health of the food and environment, is something she feels everyone needs to know about.

Kate feels regenerative agriculture plays a role in the connection between food, health, and the environment, and is passionate about how this area of agriculture can be utilized in improving human health and food security.

International Food Business is what Kate plans to study at the Dalhousie University Agricultural Campus in Truro, NS. Through this program she will be able to gain a better understanding of the food system, not only in Canada but internationally as her second year of study will take her to the Netherlands.

Kate looks forward to taking on a leadership role in the agri-food world and thanks 4-H for all the skills and leadership opportunities that have come her way as a member.
